

TERRI LEE FREEMAN

Terri Lee Freeman, president of the National Civil Rights Museum in Memphis, Tennessee and former president of the Community Foundation for the National Capital Region in Washington, D.C., is visiting Martinsville to speak with nonprofit executive directors and board chairs about board governance.

As president of the National Civil Rights Museum, Terri is responsible for providing strategic leadership and furthering the museum's mission as an educational and cultural institution. Terri has served on a variety of boards including the Community Foundation for Greater Memphis and the Memphis Convention and Visitors Bureau, as well as being a member of the 2016 class of Leadership Memphis.

She is the former chair of Washington Regional Association of Grantmakers, served as a board member for Generation Hope, and served as honorary board member of Venture Philanthropy Partners.

Terri received her bachelor's degree in journalism/communication arts from the University of Dayton and her master's degree in organizational communications from Howard University. She is married to Dr. Bowyer G. Freeman and is the proud mother of three daughters.
